Welcome

Building Nonprofit Organizations That Will Last

Increasingly, funders and supporters are requiring nonprofits to demonstrate the sustainability of their efforts. But what does that mean and how is it accomplished? Identifying the elements and processes that make an organization strong and charting a clear course for implementation are the first steps.

Following up on the overview workshop presented in January, 2007, this current series of workshops provides more in-depth training on the principles of sustainability, along with practical, easy-to-implement advice and tools for developing sustainable fundraising, marketing, and leadership development programs.

Building Sustainable Nonprofit Organizations

Community Foundation of Jackson Hole

October 15, 2007

Learning Objectives

- Learn the critical elements of sustainability
- Determine where your organization is on the road to sustainability by completing an organizational effectiveness assessment
- Identify strategic planning priorities by exploring areas your organization can strengthen
- Discover how other organizations are planning for their futures through interactive peer discussion
- Find answers to your questions about what sustainability means for your organization and gain practical information and tools you can put into immediate action

Purpose & Agenda: Board-Staff Development

Meeting Purpose

For Board members and staff of nonprofit organizations to understand and clarify their respective roles and responsibilities, create a foundation for focused leadership development, and learn how to create systems and cultures that increase the effectiveness of their staff and build the sustainability of their organizations.

The 5 Elements of Sustainability

“To make the greatest impact on society requires first and foremost a great organization, not just a great program.”

– Jim Collins, Good to Great and the Social Sectors

While there is no one formula for building a high-performance social sector organization, there are elements and processes that effective nonprofit organizations have in common. The following is a checklist of some of those fundamental components.

Clear and Compelling Vision

Brief, well-defined vision and/or mission statement

Statement of core values

Community assessment and feedback processes

Focused approach that is not redundant with other organizations' programs

Defined measures of success

Passionate and Engaged Board of Directors

Strategic approach to board recruitment and succession

Board members are articulate advocates for the organization

Clearly defined and consistently practiced roles and responsibilities

Clear expectations and accountability for board members

Written policies and procedures

Motivated, Professional Staff

Clearly defined roles and expectations

Skills and experience commensurate with needs

Appropriate compensation

Respectful, supportive work environment

Regular, constructive feedback

Adequate resources available

Effective Communications and Marketing

Strategic marketing plan

Clear, jargon-free messaging with great stories to demonstrate mission success

Proactive communications to constituents and the community

Network of key influencers

Strong, content-rich website

Strategic Approach to Fund Development

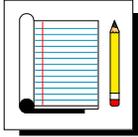

Strategic funding plan

Demonstrated support and participation by the board

Balanced portfolio of funding sources

Constituent relationship management program in place

Endowments and reserve funds

Organizational Sustainability Assessment

Use the scale below to indicate how each statement applies to your organization.

3 = yes, we have this 2 = we're working on it 1 = no, we don't have this

For any Section Score that is between 5 – 7, roll-up your sleeves and keep listening.

For any Section Score that is between 8 – 11, there is still room for improvement.

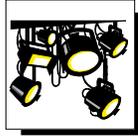

For any Section Score that is between 12 – 15, congratulations! You are well on your way to sustainability.

Notes/Observations from completed Assessment:

- What “ah-ha!” did you have, from completing this assessment?

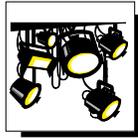

- Which of the five elements are ‘best practices’ in your organization?

- Which elements do you need to explore further?

Sustainability Element: Clear & Compelling Vision

Defining Your Organization's Culture

A clear and compelling vision includes the following elements:

- Vision – is an image of some desired future outcome to which the organization aspires. It determines behavior and guides decisions. It may describe a long term goal and could include vivid descriptions of what it will be like to achieve such a goal. A vision is aspirational and has an external focus.
- Mission – provides the core reason for the organization's existence. Usually stated in broad terms, it should be a unifying point for all organizational activities and should reflect people's idealistic motivations for doing the organization's work. In other words, why are we here?
- Core Values – provide a guide to decisions and embellishes our basic organizational beliefs. Looked at another way, value statements show what we hold near and dear. It is an integrity check, a way of life; it sets the tone for the organization and compels management decisions.

Core values require no external justification; they have intrinsic value and importance to those inside the organization. We should not change core values in response to external changes; rather, we should change strategies, if necessary, to remain true to our core values.

- Goals – are complementary to, and follow from your value statements. The goals of the organization provide general direction and guidance for developing specific objectives and actions.

Point to Remember:

These statements are not simply an exercise to create some stream of buzzwords that ring true but that no one really cares about. They are meant to promote and preserve the core of your organization's culture and stimulate the change and progress that are essential to its continued success and viability.

Practical Thinking for Aligning Your Organization

People are motivated to action when there is a strong connection between their needs and your organization's ability to fill those needs. Establishing that connection requires clear communications from and between all parts of the organization on what you stand for and what you are trying to accomplish.

First – Get the leaders of your organization to agree on the essence of its unique culture and purpose. Focus on the key elements that clearly define your mission, vision, values, principles, and goals. Avoid simply incorporating everything you may have done in the past – you can't be all things to all people.

Second – Once you have agreed to the fundamentals, craft the results into a simple message that everyone in a leadership position can communicate in a clear and consistent manner.

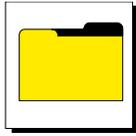

Third – Communicate the message to your staff. Listen to any concerns, but be sure to convey that this is what the organization stands for. Anyone who is not comfortable with any fundamental part of the approach should be encouraged to move on. You cannot have a high-performing organization with people on the inside who are not completely in agreement with its goals and principles.

Fourth – Communicate. Communicate. Communicate: with members, donors, key influencers, vendors, associates, the media, and each other – always conveying the same consistent message about who you are and what you're trying to accomplish. The clarity of your message will soon generate its own momentum, drawing like-minded people to your cause, and giving those already participating a much clearer sense of how they really fit in.

Fifth – Align your actions with your words. Leaders in the organization must act as they preach. Standards and principles must be modeled and enforced, otherwise they aren't your principles – they're just vague aspirations to someday have principles.

Sixth – Don't try to boil the ocean. Stay focused by limiting your activities and projects. Allocate (or reallocate) your resources to support the most important programs, and discontinue any programs that either don't completely fit your core message, or that you can no longer fully support.

Seventh – Build trust with your constituents by taking the time to listen to their concerns and aspirations. Time invested in one-on-one relationship building will pay huge future dividends in engaged, enthusiastic volunteer and financial support for your organization's goals and growth.

Vision & Mission Examples

Vision

A vision is a guiding image of success formed in terms of a contribution to society. If a strategic plan is the “blueprint” for an organization’s work, then the vision is the “artist’s rendering”.

There is one universal rule of planning: You will never be greater than the vision that guides you. The vision statement should require the organization’s members to stretch their expectations, aspirations, and performance.

A vision statement should be realistic and credible, well-articulated and easily understood, appropriate, ambitious, and responsive to change.

A compelling vision lays down the challenge for what the organization aspires to accomplish.

Compelling examples:

Children’s Hunger Relief Fund is saving the world one child at a time.

The mission of America’s Second Harvest is to create a hunger-free America.

United Way’s vision is to build a stronger America by mobilizing our communities to improve people’s lives.

The American Red Cross provides relief to victims of disasters and helps people prevent, prepare for, and respond to emergencies.

Family Resource Centers help Colorado families succeed.

Family-to-Family is dedicated to connecting families with more to families with less.

Less compelling examples:

The California Children and Families Foundation has a mission of promoting, supporting, and improving the health and early development of children from the prenatal stage to five years of age.

Feed the Children delivers food, medicine, clothing and other necessities to individuals, children and families who lack these essentials due to famine, war, poverty or natural disaster.

Head Start serves the child development needs of preschool children (birth through age five) and their low-income families.

Mission Statements

A mission statement is the expression of the why. It describes the need and what the organization is doing to meet it. It is internally focused, and is inspirational. It describes what inspires action, determines behavior, and fuels motivation.

A compelling mission statement has nine characteristics:

1. The language is bold, clear, and memorable.
2. It conveys the organization's values explicitly and implicitly.
3. There is both an emotional and rational impact.
4. It combines a "why" statement with a "what" statement.
5. The need that is being met is described in positive, not negative, terms.
6. It uses verbs that are active, not passive.
7. It inspires people to act, give, join, serve, and learn more.
8. It is adaptable for both marketing and development.
9. It summarizes succinctly the mission.

Mission Statement examples:

The Wallace Foundation

"Our mission is to enable institutions to expand learning and enrichment opportunities for all people. We do this by supporting and sharing effective ideas and practices."

To achieve our mission, we have three objectives:

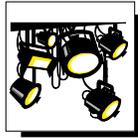

- Strengthen education leadership to improve student achievement
- Improve after-school learning opportunities
- Build appreciation and demand for the arts

The Hearing Society

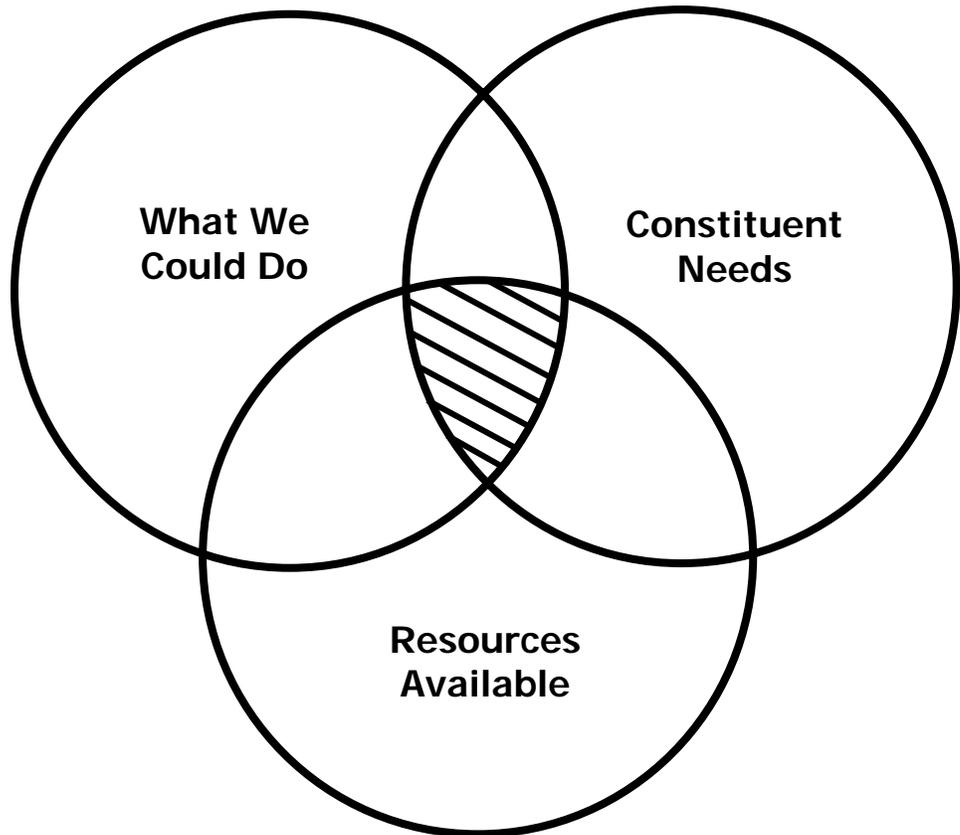

"We exist in a world of sound: children's voices, laughter and music, a baby's cry, the echo of fog horns, crunching leaves, a crackling fire, words of love and reassurance, whispered thoughts, soft breathing in the night, the ringing of a phone, signals of danger, and the fun of casual conversation.

Hearing loss separates us from these sounds. The Hearing Society helps people connect."

(Tagline developed from mission statement: "Reconnecting people with their world".)

Governance in Your Organization¹

Take a few moments to think about generative thinking in your organization.

- Who decides what the organization will pay attention to?
- Who tends to frame the problems?
- Who decides what a given problem or opportunity means for the organization?
- Who has the most influence over what gets on to the organization's agenda or list of priorities?

With this in mind, select the quadrant that best decides the generative thinking scenario in your organization:

Quadrant: _____

If you placed your organization in the “shared governance” quadrant:

- What three things (structures, processes, elements of your organization’s culture, etc.) most enabled your organization to get there?

- What are your biggest challenges, worries, or frustrations about shared governance?

If you placed your organization in one of the other (suboptimal) quadrants:

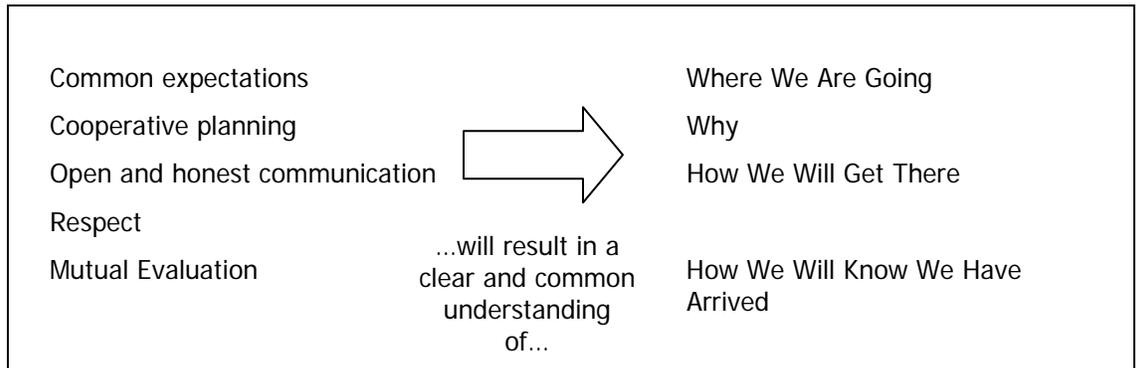

- What are the biggest costs of being in this quadrant?

- What challenges do you face in moving to shared governance?

- What could you build on to move to shared governance?

Characteristics of Effective Board-Staff Partnerships²

Factors Conducive to an Effective Board-Staff Partnership

Organizational health depends on an effective and flexible partnership between the board and the Executive Director (ED). It...

- Requires clarity and agreement about roles and responsibilities
- Requires regular and open communication between the board chair and the ED, as well as an agreement about how to work together
- Requires a willingness on everyone's part to clarify their own and each other's assumptions
- Benefits from regular and systematic feedback and assessment
- May need to be redefined as the organization develops in size and complexity

The Board

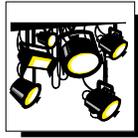

Authorized by the government and the organization's supporters, the board governs the life of the organization.

- Establish mission and direction, ensures the necessary resources, and develops guiding principles
- Retains ultimate responsibility and power
- Is accountable to the public trust and to the organizations constituencies

The Executive Director

Authorized by the board, the ED manages the daily affairs of the organization.

- Supports the board with strategic information, ideas, and connections
- Manages the affairs of the organization by ensuring appropriate planning, coordination, and implementation of the program established by the board to support the mission
- Retains immediate operational responsibility and power

Guiding Governance³

Purpose: For board members to consider the following questions, in order to discover what it means to be a governing board, and a board member.

Mission

- 1. How long has it been since our board reviewed and refreshed the mission of the organization and balanced it against day-to-day realities?
- 2. Who else should we include in discussions of mission and vision?
- 3. How do individual board members prepare themselves for their work on mission and vision?
- 4. How do we as board members maintain our connection and commitment to the mission?
- 5. Can everyone on our board clearly state our organization's mission?
- 6. What are the core values of the organization?
- 7. How are these values expressed in how we function?
- 8. Do the outcomes of each of our programs contribute to the achievement of our mission? If not, what needs to be done?

Oversight

- 1. Is our organization committed to planning as an essential part of effective leadership and management?
- 2. Do we use our plans to evaluate progress and outcomes?
- 3. Does our organization have an up-to-date code of ethics and conflict of interest policy?

- 4. How do we distinguish between board responsibilities and those of the Executive Director or staff? What are the areas in which our responsibilities overlap?
- 5. What indicators and processes do we use to find out whether our board is doing its job?
- 6. Do we regularly evaluate the Executive Director's performance? Our own performance as a board and as individual board members? What evaluation processes do we use?
- 7. Do board members have a clear written statement of their duties and responsibilities? Does the Executive Director have a clear job description?
- 8. Is the board aware of the Executive Director's salary and how it's determined? If not, why not?
- 9. Does the board regularly review the organization's Form 990, the public document?

Resources

- 1. How do we educate board members about the organization's fundraising strategy?
- 2. Does every board member make an annual contribution to the organization?
- 3. To what extent do board members actively ask others to provide financial support?
- 4. Are there obvious areas of strength and weakness in our board's fundraising performance?
- 5. Do we have adequate financial expertise among board members?
- 6. Does the board receive regular, complete financial reports? Are the reports clear and easy to understand?
- 7. What questions do we bring to our review of financial documents?

- 8. What internal controls are in place to guard against potential fraud and abuse?
- 9. Are our investment policies consistent with our values, financial situation, and long-term goals?

Outreach

- 1. Do your community stakeholders know and understand our mission?
- 2. How does the board support our outreach activities? How can this be expanded?
- 3. To what extent is our organization well known to business, government, education, and media leaders? Do we actively pursue and develop those relationships?
- 4. How could more effective outreach enhance our fundraising capabilities?
- 5. How do the board, its members, and the staff work together in the area of community outreach? How can we strengthen this partnership?

How Your Board Can Govern More and Manage Less

- Develop a strategic plan and adhere to it.
- Link the current agenda to the strategic agenda.
- Monitor the success of the organization's initiatives.
- Develop clear expectations and a plan of action for the board of Directors.
- Encourage the chief executive to think strategically.
- Prepare materials and structure meetings to direct the board's attention to matters of policy and strategy.
- Develop and use a consent agenda.
- Determine priorities and organize the agenda accordingly.
- Assess the performance of the board on a regular basis.
- Focus on policy objectives, organizational strategy, and the relationship between budgets and priorities.
- Assess the chief executive.

Evaluating the ED

Guidelines

- Do it....and do it annually.
- Do it in a constructive way.
- Make it a regular exercise for the ED, for the board, and for the organization.
- Include the ED in all aspects of the process and content of the performance evaluation.

Content

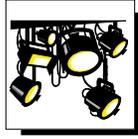

- Examine your organization's goals and how the ED's performance supports and ensures their implementation
- Establish measurable objectives with the ED related to your organization's goals and to leadership and management qualities.
- Assess the quality of the ED's relationship with the board, staff, funders, government agencies, the community, stakeholders, and consumers.

Issues that Shape the Evaluation Process

- Who has the primary responsibility: the Executive Committee? Board Chair? Full board?
- How will agreement be reached with the full board on the criteria for the evaluation?
- What is the timeframe for the evaluation?
- Will staff, community, and/or clients be involved?
- What opportunity will the ED have to respond to the evaluation?
- How will the final evaluation be shared with the full board?

Key Questions for Assessing the ED's Performance

1. What are the major objectives of your organization:
 - short term (1-2 years)
 - long term (5-10 years)
2. How well are these objectives being realized?
3. Does the ED have the necessary knowledge and skills?
4. Does the ED have the necessary personal qualities and characteristics?
5. Does the ED recruit, supervise, and retain staff?
6. What are the ED's major strengths?
7. What are the ED's major weaknesses?
8. What external factors, if any, have interfered with the ED's ability to achieve organizational goals?
9. What specific decisions and actions will be desirable or necessary to:
 - Strengthen the ED's performance?
 - Clarify the respective roles of the ED and the board?
 - Enhance the effectiveness of the organization?

Tool: Guidelines for Recruiting Board Members

By Carter McNamara

The following guidelines should be modified as necessary to conform to the particular culture and purpose of the organization.

It's very important to keep the perspective that your board deserves highly skilled and participative board members. Don't erode your goals and believe that you are lucky to get anyone at all.

When you set out to recruit new members, the most important consideration is to know what kinds of skills are currently needed by the board. Consider the nature of issues and goals currently faced by the organization. For example, if you're struggling with finances, then seek a member with strong financial skills. It's highly useful to use a Sample Board Recruitment Grid.

1. Maintain an up-to-date list of potential board candidates, including the particular skills they can bring to the organization. This is often done by the Nominating Committee or the Board Development Committee.
2. Develop a Sample Board Application Form for prospective new board members. The form should solicit information about the potential new member, including biographical information, why they want to join this board, what they hope to bring to the board, what they would like to get from their board membership and any questions they might have.
3. According to any scheduling in the By-laws and/or after strategic planning, reference major strategic goals for the organization and the chief executive to identify what skills would be highly useful to the board, e.g., if new people will be hired the board may desire people with human resource skills, etc.
4. Reference the list of potential candidates to recruit for board membership and ask to meet with them.
5. Prospective board members should meet with the board chair and the chief executive, hear an overview of the organization and receive relevant organizational materials describing the organization's products or services, receive a board member job description and a board member application form. The prospective new member should hear about how the organization orients new members. Provide names of several board members whom the prospective new member might contact with any questions.
7. Identify if there are any potential conflicts of interest with the candidate, e.g., is he or she on the board of a competing organization, a vendor of the organization, etc.

8. Invite the prospective new member to a board meeting. Notify current board members that a potential new member will be attending. Consider name tags to help the potential new member be acquainted with board members. Introduce the member right away in the meeting and, at the end of the meeting, ask the potential new member if they have any questions. Thank them for coming.

9. Shortly after the meeting, call the prospective new member to hear if they want to apply for joining the board or not. If so, solicit their completed board member application and provide all applications to the board for their review and election.

10. Notify new members (those who have been elected) and invite them to subsequent board meetings and the board orientation.

BOARD MEMBER AGREEMENT

I, _____, understand that as a member of the Board of Directors of {organization's name}, I have a legal and moral responsibility to ensure that the organization does the best work possible in pursuit of its goals. I believe in the purpose and the mission of the organization, and I will act responsibly and prudently as its steward.

As part of my responsibilities as a board member:

1. I will interpret the organization's work and values to the community, represent the organization, and act as a spokesperson.
2. I will attend all board meetings, committee meetings as appropriate and special events. If special circumstances prevent me from participating, I will notify the Board President in advance.
3. I will make a personal financial contribution at a level that is meaningful to me.
4. I will actively participate in one or more fundraising activities.
5. I will act in the best interests of the organization, and excuse myself from discussions and votes where I have a conflict of interest.
6. I will stay informed about what's going on in the organization. I will ask questions and request information. I will participate in and take responsibility for making decisions on issues, policies and other board matters.
7. I will work in good faith with staff and other board members as partners towards achievement of our goals.
8. If I don't fulfill these commitments to the organization, I will expect the board president to call me and discuss my responsibilities with me.
9. In turn, the organization will be responsible to me in several ways:
10. I will be sent, without request, quarterly financial reports and an update of organizational activities that allow me to meet the "prudent person" section of the law.
11. Opportunities will be offered to me to discuss with the executive director and the board president the organization's programs, goals, activities, and status; additionally, I can request such opportunities.

12. The organization will help me perform my duties by keeping me informed about issues in the industry and field in which we are working, and by offering me opportunities for professional development as a board member.
13. Board members and staff will respond in a straightforward fashion to questions I have that I feel are necessary to carry out my fiscal, legal and moral responsibilities to this organization. Board members and staff will work in good faith with me towards achievement of our goals.
14. The organization will provide the Board of Directors with Directors & Officers liability insurance.
15. If the organization does not fulfill its commitments to me, I can call on the board president and executive director to discuss these responsibilities.

Tool: Board Profile Assessment^{iv}

How Can We Recruit the Right Board Members?

1. Think about how you would like to be recruited. The seriousness with which a board member is recruited and selected is directly proportional to the seriousness with which the board member fulfills her/his role.
2. Define the board member's job:
 - In writing
 - Define the role of individual members as well as the role of the Board as a governing group
 - Discuss expectations (governance, implementation, volunteer). Include amount of time expected, donation expectations, committee involvement, how board member performance is evaluated
3. Use the organization's mission and values as a primary criterion for selecting new Board members.
4. Agree on profile of the future board.
 - Minimum, maximums, percentages of whatever characteristics are important to your organization.
 - People want to serve in meaningful ways; ensure potential Board members are not identified based solely due to membership to any particular demographic
5. Develop qualifications for serving. Complete profiles below as a starting point.
 - Identify gaps in desired experience and qualifications
6. Adopt a plan to identify and nurture prospects
 - Develop an action plan to start a list of people who might fit the board.
 - The identification process should be ongoing and involve all current board members
7. Be rigorous about the nomination process.
 - Consider demographic balance.
 - Look into the future: will prospective members fill changes in skills as current members leave? Who can be groomed for future leadership roles, for example?
 - Explain qualifications you feel the prospective member has.
 - Offer copies of bylaws and board policy manuals.
 - Conduct reference checks.
 - Take the time now to thoroughly explain board service in order to minimize surprises, frustration, and to signal you have high expectations.
8. Take board election and new member orientation seriously.
 - First impressions will influence a new board member's decision to stay or go.
 - Well-planned and executed orientation shortens the learning curve, ensures active involvement, and can reduce turnover.

Tool: Checklist for Successful Board Orientation^v

- Plan the orientation!
- Schedule the orientation for the most convenient time and location for all board members. Set the date well in advance to accommodate busy schedules.
- Keep it simple. Don't use orientation time to teach board members how to read a financial statement. Provide an overview of important information.
- Pace the presentation to fit time allotted. Create a timed agenda and stick to it.
- Allow time for Board members to get to know each other. Facilitate a structured introduction. Example: Board members form pairs, conduct brief interviews of each other. Each pair then takes a turn introducing his/her partner to the whole group.
- Pay attention to the room's seating arrangement. Informal circles encourage interaction and allow everyone to see each other.
- Ask seasoned or emeritus board members to share stories from the organization's past.
- Include an official "swearing in" ceremony at which time new board members pledge their service and formally acknowledge their responsibilities as board members.
- Explain board meeting procedures, including the informal norms such as dress, timing, etc.
- Pair new members with a seasoned board member to serve as a mentor, to help integrate the new member, answer questions, etc.
- Maintain a sense of humor. Humor can build camaraderie.
- Learn from experience. Ask seasoned board members, "what do you wish you had known when you first became a board member that would have made a difference in the way you did your job?"

12 Questions to Ask Staff

In the book, First Break All the Rules, authors Coffman and Buckingham identified the elements of an organization directly linked to employee retention, productivity, financial success, and client satisfaction.

If staff can answer “strongly agree” to each of the 12 questions, you are well on your way to realizing a Motivated and Professional Staff.

1. Do I know what is expected of me at work?
2. Do I have the materials and equipment I need to do my work right?
3. At work, do I have the opportunity to do what I do best every day?
4. In the last seven days, have I received recognition or praise for doing good work?
5. Does my supervisor, or someone at work, seem to care about me as a person?
6. Is there someone at work who encourages my development?
7. At work, do my opinions seem to count?
8. Does the mission/purpose of my organization make me feel my job is important?
9. Are my co-workers committed to doing quality work?
10. Do I have a best friend at work?
11. In the last six months, has someone at work talked to me about my progress?
12. This last year, have I had opportunities at work to learn and grow?

Take the Next Step

About NewLevel Group...

Who we are

NewLevel Group was formed almost three years ago with a vision to strengthen our community by helping nonprofits and businesses take the next step in their development -- whether the next step means launching a business, developing a board, or updating an existing brand. Our team is made up of seasoned professionals who look at challenges from various perspectives honed from decades of experience in the business and nonprofit sectors. We plan as well as implement, never losing sight of our goal to deliver your desired results.

What we do

First and foremost, we listen. We listen to you, your board, your clients, and your colleagues to fully understand the challenges you face. Then, we form a team that will partner with you to identify your goals, outline strategies to achieve them, and, if needed, work with you to implement the tactics.

How we do it

Our approach to helping organizations improve their results reflects our shared values of collaboration, commitment, and community. We are different from other consulting and management firms in several significant ways:

- We work collaboratively; not just treating symptoms, but finding solutions for the underlying causes.
- We implement; we don't just create pretty plans, but roll up our sleeves to get the job done.
- We're focused on results; a good process is important, but the outcome is what really matters.
