Building Nonprofit Organizations That Will Last

Increasingly, funders and supporters are requiring nonprofits to demonstrate the sustainability of their efforts. But what does that mean and how is it accomplished? Identifying the elements and processes that make an organization strong and charting a clear course for implementation are the first steps.

This workshops focuses on the principles of strategic thinking and strategic planning, along with practical, easy-to-implement advice and tools for engaging board and staff in building a strategic approach to change for your organization.

Learning Objectives

- Learn the critical elements of sustainability
- Explore ways to think and plan strategically
- Clarify board and staff roles and responsibilities for strategic planning and execution
- Identify practical approaches for setting priorities and aligning action to make the most of scarce resources
- Through interactive peer discussion, discover how other organizations are managing a strategic approach to change
- Find answers to your questions about building your organization’s effectiveness and gain practical information and tools you can put into immediate action
Purpose & Agenda:

Meeting Purpose
For Board members and staff of nonprofit organizations to explore how to think and plan strategically, clarify board and staff roles and responsibilities for strategic planning and execution, and set priorities and align action to make the most of scarce resources.

Strategic Thinking Is…

By J. Russell and L. Russell

Strategic Thinking is a way of looking at the circumstances and the environment you face and then making decisions and taking actions with a certain mental model or mindset. The components of a strategic thinking mental model are:

- Holding an image of the vision or ideal future in one’s mind. Strategic thinking begins with a clear understanding of the desired long-range future for the organization. With this vision or idea in mind, decisions and actions are more likely to be directly and indirectly shaped by this overarching objective.

- Drawing on and being shaped by the organization’s core values. Whereas the vision describes the end state that individuals are striving to create over time, the core values speak to the moment. These values, when clearly defined, understood, and accepted by people at all levels of the organization, are more likely to lead to strategic decision making and actions.

- Continuously scanning the environment for opportunities and threats. The strategic thinking mindset depends on a keen awareness of the environment. The antennae are always up. Strategic thinkers discover opportunities by being open and receptive to new information—and they are able to detect potential threats early-on by being conscious of emerging issues and events that may have a harmful effect on the organization.

- Seeing patterns and relationships in events and circumstances. Strategic thinkers “connect the dots” by looking for and recognizing the patterns and relationships among events and circumstances. Strategic thinkers, for example, will be the first to detect an emerging pattern of client/customer requests or complaints. They can then begin the conversation around the meaning of this trend for the organization and its future success.
Recognizing the interconnections and interdependencies before making decisions and taking action. Strategic thinkers are deeply aware of the interdependencies and interrelationships among actions and events. They recognize that every action within a system (for example, lowering prices to attract new customers) may or may not have its desired effect (for example, increase in new business), but that there are unintended consequences for this decision (for example, reduced margins, lower perceived value of the product) that will occur. This rule – the rule of unintended consequences – is greatly respected by strategic thinkers.

Making decisions and taking actions for the long term that are shaped by the vision, core values, and awareness of the environment and the interdependencies. The final component of strategic thinking integrates the previous components into a strategic perspective that shapes how the individual makes decisions in the moment – with thought to the long-term vision, core values, and deep awareness of the environment.
“To make the greatest impact on society requires first and foremost a great organization, not just a great program.”

– Jim Collins, Good to Great and the Social Sectors

While there is no one formula for building a high-performance social sector organization, there are elements and processes that effective nonprofit organizations have in common. The following is a checklist of some of those fundamental components.

Clear and Compelling Vision
Brief, well-defined vision and/or mission statement
Statement of core values
Community assessment and feedback processes
Focused approach that is not redundant with other organizations’ programs
Defined measures of success

Passionate and Engaged Board of Directors
Strategic approach to board recruitment and succession
Board members are articulate advocates for the organization
Clearly defined and consistently practiced roles and responsibilities
Clear expectations and accountability for board members
Written policies and procedures

Effective Communications and Marketing
Strategic marketing plan
Clear, jargon-free messaging with great stories to demonstrate impact
Proactive communications to constituents and the communities served
Network of key influencers
Strong, content-rich website
Strategic Approaches for Funding

Strategic funding plan
Demonstrated support and participation by the board
Balanced portfolio of funding sources
Donor/funder relationship management programs
Endowments and reserve funds

Motivated, Professional Staff

Clearly defined roles and expectations
Skills and experience commensurate with needs
Appropriate compensation
Respectful, supportive work environment with regular, constructive feedback
Adequate resources available
Organizational Sustainability Assessment

Use the scale below to indicate how each statement applies to your organization.

3 = yes, we have this
2 = we’re working on it
1 = no, we don’t have this

For any Section Score that is between 5 – 7, roll-up your sleeves and keep listening.
For any Section Score that is between 8 – 11, there is still room for improvement.
For any Section Score that is between 12 – 15, congratulations! You are well on your way to sustainability.

Notes/Observations from completed Assessment:

- What “ah-ha!” did you have, from completing this assessment?

- Which of the five elements are ‘best practices’ in your organization?

- Which elements do you need to explore further?
Governance as Leadership

- Governance by Edict
- Governance by Default
- Management as Governance
- Shared Governance

Adapted from Governance as Leadership by Richard P. Chell, William P. Ryan, Barbara E. Taylor, published by Wiley & Sons, Inc., 2005
Examining Vision, Mission, & Values

Insert your organization’s current vision/mission statement:

- Do you find this statement personally inspiring?
- Can you envision this vision and mission being as valid 100 years from now as it is today?
- Does the statement help you think expansively about the long-term possibilities and range of activities your organization can consider over the next 100 years, beyond its current services, programs, and strategies?
- Does the statement help you decide what activities to not pursue, to eliminate from consideration?
- Is this vision/mission authentic - something true to what your organization is all about - not merely words on paper that sound nice?
- Would this statement be greeted with enthusiasm rather than cynicism by a broad base of people in your organization?
- When telling your children and/or other loved ones what you do for a living, would you feel proud in describing your work in terms of this vision or mission?
Core Values

Values provide a guide to decisions and embellish on our basic organizational beliefs. Looked at another way, values show what we hold near and dear. They are a way of life, setting the tone for the organization and compelling management decisions.

Core values require no external justification; they have intrinsic value and importance to those inside the organization. We should not change core values in response to external changes; rather, we should change strategies, if necessary, to remain true to our core values.

Take a minute to think about the core values for your organization and list them below:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Core Value:</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Question</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. If you started a new organization, would you build it around this core value, regardless of the industry?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Would you want your organization to continue to stand for this core value 100 years into the future, no matter what changes occur in the outside world?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Would you want your organization to hold this core value, even if at some point in time it became a competitive disadvantage – even if in some instances the environment penalized the organization for living this core value?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4. Do you believe that those who do not share this core value - those who breach it consistently - simply do not belong in your organization?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5. Would you personally continue to hold this core value even if you were not rewarded for holding it?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6. Would you change jobs before giving up this core value?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7. If you awoke tomorrow with more than enough money to retire comfortably for the rest of your life, would you continue to apply this core value to your productive activities?</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Strategic Planning Steps

1. Assess the current situation
   - SWOT Analysis (Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities, Threats)
   - Community and stakeholder feedback (surveys, interviews, questionnaires)

2. Identify key issues. Key issues can be described as “the need to do or have ...”.
   When prioritizing Key Issues, consider:
   - urgency
   - resources needed (time, costs, etc.)
   - feasibility
   - desirability
   - usefulness
   - potential impact on mission

3. Develop goals. Based on the Key Issues already identified, the goals in your strategic plan describe a desired outcome, and provide general direction for developing specific strategies.

4. Devise strategies for achieving your organization’s goals. Strategies articulate the best use of resources to achieve the goals of the organization.

5. Create action steps (tactics). Action plans are specific steps you must take to execute your strategies. Action plans detail who will do what by when. They also:
   - are realistic with respect to the abilities and the potential of the people involved and to the environment in which the objectives will be met
   - carry built-in evaluation that is stated in measurable terms
   - identify the resources needed (e.g.: time, training, equipment, money, materials, people)

6. Establish a review mechanism for making ongoing adjustments and improvements. This requires having regular updates (monthly/quarterly) to measure progress toward the goals.

PRIMARY STRENGTHS

- A
- B
- C
- D
- E

Invest: Clear matches of strengths and opportunities lead to comparative advantage.

Defend: Areas of strength matched by areas of threat indicate a need to mobilize resources.

PRIMARY WEAKNESSES

- F
- G
- H
- I
- J

Decide: Areas of opportunity matched by areas of weakness require a judgement call: invest or divest.

Damage Control: Areas of threat matched by areas of weakness indicate need for damage control.

About NewLevel Group...

Who we are

NewLevel Group is a values-driven consulting firm supporting the work of socially responsible organizations and their leaders in advancing missions that benefit people, profits, and planet.

Our team is made up of seasoned professionals who look at challenges from various perspectives honed from decades of experience in the business and nonprofit sectors. We plan as well as implement, never losing sight of our goal to deliver your desired results.

What we do

First and foremost, we listen. We listen to you, your board, your clients, and your colleagues to fully understand the challenges you face. Then, we form a team that will partner with you to identify your goals, outline strategies to achieve them, and, if needed, work with you to implement the tactics.

How we do it

Our approach to helping organizations improve their results reflects our shared values of collaboration, commitment, and community. We are different from other consulting and management firms in several significant ways:

- We work collaboratively; not just treating symptoms, but finding solutions for the underlying causes.
- We implement; we don't just create pretty plans, but roll up our sleeves to get the job done.
- We're focused on results; a good process is important, but the outcome is what really matters.
